From a media release:

The Writers Guild of Canada (WGC) celebrated 30 years of outstanding screenwriting in Canadian television, film and digital media tonight at the annual WGC Screenwriting Awards, held at Koerner Hall in Toronto. The gala brought together hundreds of screenwriters, industry professionals, and fans.

Created in 1997 to recognize excellence in Canadian screenwriting, and raise the profile of screenwriters, the WGC Screenwriting Awards have grown as the Canadian industry has expanded. Over the years, we have celebrated writers whose work has shaped Canadian culture, and reached audiences around the world.

This year's award winners demonstrate the breadth of talent across nine categories, and include Katherine Sandford for Preschool (Mittens & Pants , “Pants in the Box”), Garry Campbell for Comedy Series (North of North , “Dumpcano”), Kaveh Mohebbi for Short Series (18 to 35 , “Buck Mustang”), and many more.

Special honors were also presented:

- Simon Barry was honored with the prestigious Showrunner Award.
- Jeremy Boxen received the McGrath Service Award for exceptional service to the Guild.
- Lawrence S. Mirkin was presented with the Alex Barris Mentorship Award.
- Ian Weir received the Margaret Collier Award, presented with the Canadian Academy as supporting partner.

Hosted by Ali Hassan (Run the Burbs, Sort Of, Laugh Out Loud) and written by Kurt Smeaton (Children Ruin Everything, Kim's Convenience), the gala featured lively moments, and presentations by well-known industry professionals and creators, including Nadine Bhabha (Heated Rivalry, Letterkenny), Laura Good (Bet, The Bletchley Circle: San Francisco), Penny E.
